Welcome to the official home of the Royal Thai Navy, as part of the honour and protocol when meeting a foreign head of state or royal figure. In February 2014, Crown Prince Vajiralongkorn organised a birthday party for Princess Srirasmi, his former wife, and then prime minister at the time, Thaksin Shinawatra's daughter, and in doing so, flouted protocol. The presence of the members of the royal family during the party was also in question as earlier in the year, Princess Srirasmi's brother, Lieutenant Colonel Songpol Srirasmi, sexually harassed eight members of a Thai naval unit for which he was supervising. The Military Police Office stated in a media statement on November 29, 2014 that those who were present at the party in question, along with those who have been ruled as indirect accomplices, are being charged with violating the military police law. The charges are classified as crimes against the royal house, and involve an offence of armed rebellion and an act of causing a civil war which is a crime against the state. The Crown Prince was at the time acting as commander in chief of the Royal Thai Army. He was previously a Royal Navy Adm.
